AMAZING IS STANDING ON YOUR OWN TWO FEET.

Just six weeks after birth, Gabby Mansour was diagnosed with a rare disease, tibia pseudarthrosis, which had caused her leg to break and not heal. Gabby's parents were told by doctors that amputation was the best course. They didn't accept that—and neither did the surgical team at NewYork-Presbyterian. Performing 9 surgeries over the course of 6 years, they repaired and strengthened Gabby's leg—so much so, that now the only braces Gabby needs to wear are on her teeth.
