How Much Is Enough? Nuclear Deterrence Then and Now

KEIR A. LIEBER

University of Notre Dame

Keir A. Lieber is Associate Professor in the Department of Political Science at the University of Notre Dame. His areas of expertise include the causes of war, nuclear weapons and strategy, U.S. foreign policy, and international relations theory. Lieber is author of War and the Engineers: The Primacy of Politics over Technology (Cornell University Press, 2005) and editor of War, Peace, and International Political Realism (University of Notre Dame Press, forthcoming). His articles have appeared in leading scholarly and foreign policy publications – most recently in International Security, Foreign Affairs, and The Atlantic Monthly. Lieber has been awarded fellowships from the Brookings Institution, Council on Foreign Relations (International Affairs Fellowship), Earhart Foundation, John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation, Andrew Mellon Foundation, and Smith Richardson Foundation. He received his M.A. and Ph.D. from the University of Chicago and B.A. from the University of Wisconsin-Madison. At Notre Dame, Lieber is also a faculty fellow of the Kroc Institute for International Peace Studies and the Nanovic Institute for European Studies, and co-director of the Notre Dame International Security Program.

Dr. Lieber's lecture is the third in the WMD Proliferation and US National Security: A Lecture Series sponsored by CAGS in the Fall 2008 semester
