

YOUR HOROSCOPE: YOUR ASTROLOGICAL SUN-SIGN POTENTIALS T

BACKGROUND: According to astrologers, your horoscope is a map of the planetary positions at the time and place of your birth. Your Sun Sign is the constellation/sign of the Zodiac occupied by the Sun on your birth date. Although there are many factors typically considered when interpreting your horoscope, the Sun Sign is considered the most important single factor, revealing your basic personality traits and potentials for growth and development. Our question, then, is: “Do those personality traits correspond reliably with birthdates?”

PROCEDURE: To test this concept, search the following list of traits and interests until you find the particular combination of traits and interests which come closest to how you see yourself. Then, on a separate sheet of paper, write the NUMBER of that combination (1-12), and your birthday (e.g. “July 25”).

Also, write YES or NO if you think astrology can give accurate predictions (YES) or not (NO).

Fold the paper in half, so the information is hidden inside, and pass it in when called for. Your teacher will then re-distribute the sheets, and show you a key which reveals the astrological Sun-Signs and dates for each number. See the number on the sheet you received? Find that number on the key, then look at the corresponding date-range. If the date on your sheet fits in that date-range, write “HIT” on the sheet. If it does not, write “MISS” on the sheet. Your teacher will count the number of “HITS” and “MISSES” in the class, and discuss how these results compare with what could be expected due to random chance. A significantly higher number of HITS might suggest that something other than chance could be operating. Answer the Discussion questions provided, and be prepared to share your answers with the class during class discussion.
