

Transatlantic Public Policy Series

edited by Professor Eberhard Bohne (German University of Administrative Sciences Speyer), Professor Charles F. Bonser (Indiana University) and Professor Kenneth M. Spencer (University of Birmingham)

Today more than ever, policy and institutional changes in the European Union, the United States and on a global level can best be understood from a transatlantic perspective. Therefore, the new Transatlantic Public Policy Series publishes contributions that explore transatlantic relations and compare the impact of global, regional and national policy development across the Atlantic. This series has been initiated by the Transatlantic Policy Consortium (TPC), which is a network of about 20 European and 20 North- American academic and training institutions in the fields of education and research for public policy and administration, international relations and public law. The TPC network organises joint research and publications, student exchanges and regular colloquia.

Eberhard Bohne; Charles F. Bonser; Kenneth M. Spencer (eds.) Transatlantic Perspectives on Liberalization and Democratic Governance

Globalization, expanding market places, new forms of alliance, world trade issues, the issues of terrorism and security, as well as other key areas of economic and social well-being, see the forging of new relationships between the EU and the USA. These Atlantic Alliance partners are in the process of developing both their own internal responses to global issues and at the same time looking, where appropriate, to develop common approaches. The papers centre around the role of the state with social and economic actors, policy development and regulatory challenges to the state and the changing nature of democratic institutions and participation. The volume provides a unique insight into European and US-American public policy issues and thinking.
