2011 Admission Standards

There have been several questions about the slight adjustment in our 2011 admission standards. We are working to implement the Indiana University 2011 admission requirements that we have shared over the last few years via our website, in presentations, and other communications. Only the prescriptive language of specific math courses for the required seventh semester credit has changed, allowing additional college preparatory math courses to meet this requirement. However, trigonometry, pre-calculus, and calculus are still the best courses to prepare students for IU's math curriculum. In this first year of the 2011 admission standards, we will review in detail the college preparatory courses that applicants have taken. With this change, we feel that we are best able to analyze the math courses taken by our applicants for fall 2011. We believe this change in language, but not policy, will help us manage the fall 2011 admissions process. We firmly support improving retention and graduation rates, with the new admission standards supporting these goals.

Important Reminders

- A senior year schedule is required for a complete application. An application will remain incomplete until this information is received.
- Please note that we require all components for each administration of the SAT or ACT that students take. We will be unable to process a student's file until we receive all components for each test.
- Please allow two business days for any documents submitted electronically to be processed and entered into our student information system. It is important to keep this in mind regarding the November 1 scholarship deadline.

Important Updates

College GO! Week

We acknowledge and support the goal of College GO! Week, but Indiana University Bloomington is not participating in the automatic fee waiver this year. We will continue to offer fee waivers to students who qualify (including 21st Century Scholars and students who receive SAT and ACT fee waivers).

Scholarship Updates for 2011
