

Getting Wired and Rewired: Facing the Challenges of the Twenty-First Century

Suellen K. Reed

Dr. Reed discussed the new directions that Indiana public education must take in the twenty-first century. Innovative and prepared teachers play an increasingly important role as they prepare for tomorrow. The first generation that grew up “totally connected” has entered the workforce. Their younger brothers and sisters attending Indiana public schools are even more connected; educators face new challenges in reaching students on their terms. Today is an exciting time to be a teacher.
