It has been fashionable since September 11, 2001, to focus on medieval al-Andalus as some sort of interfaith utopia. After an examination of the reasons behind this, Professor Hughes will examine, as a test case, several medieval Jewish philosophers, many of whom are held up as exemplars of Jewish “universalism.”

Tuesday, 28 April, 5.30 PM, IMU, State Room East

“MUSLIM AND JEW: RETHINKING THE PARADIGM”

graduate student workshop

for the pre-circulated paper, please email mest@indiana.edu

28 April, Sycamore Hall 224, 10.30 – 11.45 AM

Aaron W. Hughes (PhD IU, Religious Studies, 2000) is Philip S. Bernstein Chair of Jewish Studies at the Department of Religion and Classics at the University of Rochester, New York.