9:00 - 10:30 AM Opening Session — Room 450 B

Moderated by Brian Winchester, Director of the Center for Global Change, IUB

Patrick O'Meara, IU Vice President for International Affairs

Welcoming Remarks

Susan Sutton, IU Associate Vice President for International Affairs

What is Internationalization?

What are International Learning Outcomes?

Scott Sernau, Director of International Programs, IUSB

Thinking Internationally on a Small Campus

10:45 - 12 noon Morning Breakout Sessions

Exploring the Basics of International Learning Assessment (Darla Deardorff) — Room 450 B

With the growing trend toward outcomes assessment, how do we measure the global learning outcomes of our students? What do we need to know about assessment in international education? Who needs to be involved in assessment? How do we even get started in assessing outcomes? This session will cover key principles in international education assessment, as well as "lessons learned."

Internationalizing through Curriculum Development (Jan Cowan and Dawn Whitehead) — Board Room

This session will explore means for international course development and revision. Faculty will discuss how they have internationalized their syllabi and teaching methods. In addition to course internationalization, the session will also consider how to internationalize the curriculum overall.

Internationalizing through Technology (Hilary Kahn, Fernando Ona, Stephanie Leslie, and Joshua Wells) — Room 264

As we internationalize the curriculum of our campuses, staff and faculty are increasingly reliant on innovative interactive technologies to promote international dialogues, diverse perspectives, civic engagement, and global competency. This breakout session considers the role of interactive video, Skype, Face Book, and other interactive technologies for promoting global learning. Specific examples and interactive links will be provided.

12 noon - 1:30 p.m. Lunch and Keynote — Room 450 B

Introduction by Brian Winchester, Director of the Center for Global Change, IUB

The Academy's GPS: Global Positioning for Student Learning, Caryn McTighe Musil, Senior Vice President, Association of American Colleges and Universities

Increasing numbers of college and university mission statements name goals like global learning, preparation for the global workforce, or global citizenship as aims for college student learning. But how effective is the Global Positioning System which the academy currently has in place to ensure such learning is possible? Dr. Musil will draw upon research to suggest where higher education might need our own "shovel-ready" stimulus plan. She will also describe innovative curricular and co-curricular designs that promise to re-map global learning in exciting, integrative ways.

1:45 - 3:00 p.m. Afternoon Breakout Sessions

Exploring the Basics of International Learning Assessment (Darla Deardorff) — Room 450 B

With the growing trend toward outcomes assessment, how do we measure the global learning outcomes of our students? What do we need to know about assessment in international education? Who needs to be involved in assessment? How do we even get started in assessing outcomes? This session will cover key principles in international education assessment, as well as "lessons learned."

Preparing for Internationalization on your Campus (Caryn Musil and Susan Sutton) — Board Room

This session will consider steps involved in thinking about and preparing for comprehensive campus internationalization. Time will be devoted for a discussion on how the differential missions of the IU campuses demand different strategies and will yield distinct results.

New Directions in Study Abroad (Stephanie Leslie, Angeles Martinez, Tim Carlsen, and Jenny Weatherford) — Room 310

During this session we will explore opportunities to expand student access to study abroad through innovative program design and management. We will hear from faculty and administrators from across Indiana University about their experiences as they work to include students from a broader range of disciplines and varied responsibilities outside of college.
