

Assistant Professor, Ethnomusicology, Pomona College, 3-year position

Pomona College is seeking an assistant professor to fill a three-year replacement position in Ethnomusicology in the Music Department from July 1, 2010, through June 30, 2013. Candidates should hold the Ph.D. and show evidence of ethnomusicological research as indicated by scholarly presentations and publications. Area of specialization is open. Preference will be given to candidates with at least two years' teaching experience. The candidate should be committed to working in an undergraduate liberal arts environment. Responsibilities include teaching five courses and supervising two non-Western ensembles taught by specialists. Teaching load includes an introductory course in World Music, a theory and methods course in Ethnomusicology, and three additional courses based on the candidate's expertise and the department's needs. Experience teaching courses in music theory and aural skills is desirable. If appropriate, leading a non-Western ensemble may be considered part of the teaching load. Send letter of application, CV, graduate transcripts, sample publication or conference paper, and three letters of recommendation to Ethnomusicology Search, Department of Music, Pomona College, 340 North College Avenue, Claremont, CA, 91711. Complete applications received by October 16, 2009 will receive full consideration.

Pomona College is a member of the Claremont Colleges and is a highly selective, coeducational liberal arts college located 35 miles east of downtown Los Angeles. The Music Department has ten full-time faculty, 26 part-time applied music and ensemble instructors. The Department serves music majors as well as a large number of non-majors each semester. Pomona College is committed to excellence through diversity and welcomes applications from women and members of underrepresented groups.
