RESEARCH INTERESTS

My research focuses on well-being. One line of work explores the mental health consequences of social role occupancy and role sequencing. Another line of work draws attention to the impact of race and gender tokenism in the workplace on mental and physical health. A third line of research pulls these two streams of thought together in an effort to better understand health disparities among the Black Middle Class. In addition to research on health, I publish in the areas of socialization, identity, and self-concept development.

TEACHING INTERESTS/EXPERIENCE

Social Psychology
Race and Mental Health
Race and Ethnic Relations

Medical Sociology
Stress and Mental Health
Life Course and Aging
