Former faculty to be feted at Spring Medical Weekend

A forensic pathologist and pediatric anesthesiologist will be honored by their former colleagues at the 58th Spring Medical Alumni Weekend at IUSM, May 14-15.

John E. Pless, MD, will be the recipient of the Distinguished Alumnus Award and Lynda J. Means, MD, will receive the Glenn W. Irwin Jr. MD Distinguished Faculty Award at a May 14 luncheon for IU medical alumni from around the country. They also will gather for class reunions, educational seminars and other events that weekend.

Dr. Pless, the Clyde G. Culbertson Professor Emeritus of Pathology and Laboratory Medicine, currently serves as a consultant in forensic medicine. He's nationally known for his work and during his IU career supervised more than 300 postmortem examinations annually for coroners throughout Indiana and served as an expert witness in criminal and civil cases.

A Bedford, Ind., native, Dr. Pless served as associate chair of the Department of Pathology and directed the department's Division of Forensic Pathology. After earning his IU medical degree in 1963, he completed residencies in South Bend and was an officer in the U.S. Army Reserve.

Dr. Means is the former executive associate dean for academic affairs at the IU School of Medicine. In that role she was responsible for the supervision for faculty affairs, which includes school policies and procedure related to faculty, diversity and faculty development, and medical school admissions.

She also was professor of anesthesia and of surgery, and a critical care consultant at Riley Hospital for Children.

Dr. Means received her medical degree from IU in 1977 and completed pediatric and anesthesia residencies at the IU Medical Center. Currently, she serves as a lecturer at Harvard Medical School and is an anesthesiologist Children's Hospital in Boston.

The Glenn W. Irwin Jr. MD Distinguished Faculty Award is named in honor of the man who served as dean of the School from 1965 to 1973. Dr. Irwin also served as chancellor of the Indiana University-Purdue University Indianapolis campus until his retirement in 1986.

IU Team Takes Aim at Curbing Hoosier Violence

A partnership has strengthened its ranks and set its sights on reducing violent injuries and deaths throughout the state.

The Indiana Partnership to Prevent Violent Injury and Death (formerly the Indiana Partnership to Prevent Firearm Violence) has formed a collaboration with the William S. and Christine S. Hall Center for Law and Health at the Indiana University School of Law – Indianapolis and has a new name change.

This collaboration partnership will become the first project in the Center’s Public Health Law Program to focus on public health research and scholarship.

“We do so much more than address firearm violence,” said Marilyn Bull, MD, medical director of the Indiana Partnership to Prevent Firearm Violence and director of Developmental Pediatrics, Riley Hospital for Children and Indiana University School of Medicine.

“As with any other public health issue, we must deal with the issue by assessment, policy development and assurance,” said Dr. Bull. “By working toward a comprehensive data collection system, providing legal and policy research and evaluating intervention, the Partnership can work to provide information about lowering firearm injury and death in the State of Indiana.”

“The Center’s knowledge of public health law, as well as its ability to mobilize other professors and resources in the law school in several areas including criminal law and procedure, juvenile law and family law will enhance the research mission of the Partnership,” said Eleanor D. Kinney, JD, MPH, co-director of the William S. and Christine S. Hall Center for Law and Health at the Indiana University School of Law - Indianapolis.

The Partnership brings together more than 40 departments and programs at Indiana University Medical Center and Riley Hospital, professional medical associations, individuals, faith communities, and civic and government organizations from around the state. The Partnership takes aim at one main target; to reduce and ultimately eliminate violent injury and death.

The Partnership was established in 1999 by a grant from the Joyce Foundation, a Chicago-based philanthropy that supports public policies designed to improve the quality of life in the Great Lakes region.

NLM expands Go Local

The National Library of Medicine has expanded MedlinePlus Go Local coverage to include the states of Indiana and Massachusetts. Patients, families and friends from those states join residents of North Carolina and Missouri in being able to link from MedlinePlus health information to local health services.

Web users in those states can look at information on “diabetic diet” on MedlinePlus and link to local endocrinologists, dieticians or diabetes clinics in their state.

INHealthConnect is a project of the IUSM Ruth Lilly Medical Library and the Indiana Health Sciences Libraries Association. Go Local Massachusetts is sponsored by the Lamar Soutter Library, University of Massachusetts Medical School in Worcester.

Riley Hospital opens first safety store

Riley Hospital for Children, Riley Hospital's Community Education and Child Advocacy Department announced the opening of the Safety Store and the launch of the comprehensive Get On Board with Child Safety injury prevention campaign in Indiana. Injuries are the leading cause of death for children ages 14 and under in Indiana and nationwide.

Riley Hospital's Safety Store is the first in the nation to provide education and offer low-cost products to help prevent injuries to all children, including children with disabilities or special health-care needs. Bike helmets, smoke detectors, cabinet locks, outlet covers and carbon monoxide detectors are among the products that will be available for families statewide for the first time in a children's hospital setting.

The Get on Board with Child Safety campaign is a national child injury prevention initiative to educate parents, caregivers and consumers about the changes they can make to prevent unintentional injuries in and around the home and on the road. The campaign is led by Dorel Juvenile Group USA's Safety 1st brand and the National Association of Children's Hospitals and Related Institutions.

Throughout 2005, Get on Board with Child Safety will sponsor several educational events such as a home safety makeover where an experienced childproofer will work closely with an Indiana family to demonstrate how products can be installed to help prevent injuries to children in the home and how families can obtain these products and related education through Riley Hospital's Safety Store.

For more information about Riley Hospital's Safety Store, the Get on Board with Child Safety campaign and child injury prevention tips and resources, visit www.getonboardwithsafety.com, or call 888-365-2022.
