

POSITION ANNOUNCEMENT
SCHOOL OF PUBLIC AND ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS
INDIANA UNIVERSITY- BLOOMINGTON CAMPUS
LECTURER FACULTY POSITION IN HEALTH ADMINISTRATION

Indiana University School of Public and Environmental Affairs on the Bloomington Campus seeks a candidate for the position of lecturer with a background in health care administration, management and/or policy. The candidate will teach in the Health Administration Major which is part of a Bachelor of Science in Public Health (BSPH) degree program – one of four undergraduate degrees offered in the School. The successful candidate will possess an advanced degree (such as a MPH, MHA, MBA, Ph.D. or equivalent) in health care administration, public health, business, public administration/policy, economics, political science, sociology, or a related field. Preference will be given to candidates with expertise and experience teaching undergraduate courses in health care policy/management, contemporary administrative health care issues, and/or strategic planning in health care organizations. In addition to teaching, the candidate will provide teaching related service, including expert advice on curriculum changes, serve on teaching-related committees, provide faculty leadership for the Health Administration major, and serve as mentor/advisor for health administration students. Career experience in the health care sector is valued, although not required.

SPEA is a multidisciplinary, professional school within Indiana University committed to excellence in research, teaching, and service and to addressing critical issues of public and environmental affairs. SPEA is one of the largest U.S. public affairs school in the nation with more than 70 tenure-track faculty on its two main campuses, Bloomington and Indianapolis. Faculty members teach required and elective courses in programs at the undergraduate, professional masters, and doctoral levels. The school offers degrees in public affairs, environmental science, public health, and arts management. SPEA graduate programs consistently rank among the best in the country.

Review of applications will begin March 1, 2012 and continue until the position is filled.
